design guide

President and Studio Director

What is Smart Design?

As more of our clients decide to remodel rather than relocate, we're seeing a trend toward what we define as "Smart Design." A flexible, creative approach that works to maximize project budgets, Smart Design involves highly functional, simpler cabinetry design and often includes the use of green and sustainable products.

While the ornate built-in furniture look will always be popular with our clients, sleeker contemporary and transitional kitchens are gaining favor. Because of the growing selection of renewable eco-friendly cabinetry, contemporary and transitional kitchens fit the Smart Design trend. Several of our cabinet lines - Grabill, Ovation and Leicht - lend themselves beautifully to this new design direction. Want to know more? Stop in our studio or call to register for one of our fall design workshops to find out how you can realize your kitchen design dreams.

MODERNIZING TRADITION

"We love our kitchen! Working with Tina and Drury was effortless and professional. Drury Design is the best contractor we've ever worked with." -Pat and Kirsten McKay

Homeowners: Pat and Kirsten McKay of Glen Ellyn

Designer: Tina Muller

Project: Kitchen

Solutions: Long, narrow and confining described the McKay's former kitchen. The client's overall design vision was to create a clean, bright, fresh looking kitchen. Opening up the doorway into the family room connected the kitchen to the house. To balance the kitchen and widen the look, Tina anchored the room using the range and sink wall as focal points. Revitalizing unused space, Tina worked in an entertaining area with storage.

WHOLE HOUSE RENOVATION

“Everyone on the Drury team was so professional. They never let us down - from start to finish - and were really interested in giving us what we wanted.”

- Homeowners

- Location: Naperville
- Designer: Gladys Schanstra, CKD, CBD
- Project: Entire home renovation in four months
- Solutions: With 15 years worth of ideas, the homeowners were ready to transform the house they built into the home they wanted to live in.

Sizzling with functionality and beauty throughout, the project’s scope encompassed a new kitchen, master and secondary baths, powder room, additional bath, laundry room and butler’s pantry along with all new doors, floors and furnishings. Gladys says, “Organization combined with the right installation team allows us to carry out the project from the design phase to the end smoothly. We consider the client’s wishes and needs and make their dream a reality.”

Crafting 20 Years of Showcase Kitchens

DAN HOURIGAN, SENIOR INSTALLATION TEAM LEADER

Working with Gail since our inception, Dan is our most senior installer and a master carpenter. In 20+ years, Dan and his crew have installed Drury Design projects in hundreds of homes.

How does 2008 kitchen design differ from 1988?
Twenty years ago, kitchens were simple change-outs. We took out the cabinets and put new ones in. Today most of the kitchens we do are pretty much top-notch and all are very, very custom. People are getting a lot more creative and are investing a lot more in having a showcase quality kitchen that is the highlight of their home.

What makes a Drury Design?

All of Drury's designers are talented with great ideas and vision. The kitchens showcase their abilities. They challenge us with their creativity. I like the hands-on putting the design together and making it all work. It's not just the carpentry, but also all the appliances, surfaces and the mechanicals. There's lots of planning that goes into it and you have to be a little creative when working within an existing system. At some point you have to fit in certain things like plumbing and ductwork. Most of the time, the electrical is pretty extensive. It's always really satisfying to see it all come together. We've had projects featured in so many magazines.

“Dan and his team treat each and every job as if it was the most important project they would ever work on and make the customers feel that nothing else matters except their home's design project.”
