Revitalizing Homes and Kitchens

Almost 80% of our clients live in older homes. While the home's architecture, the space and the location may be perfect, their existing kitchen is not.

Kitchens today serve many purposes: home office, entertainment center, coffee shop, restaurant and gathering space. Because each family's lifestyle imprint is unique, we ask in-depth questions before we begin designing their kitchenscape.

Once we script out the room's intended purposes, we design several floor plans and custom furnishing solutions. Our clients become our design partners as we finalize decisions and order materials. With their input, we design award-winning concepts together.

Does your kitchen need a revitalization? If so, we hope you'll join us at this year's Glen Ellyn Kitchen Walk on October 5. And, feel free to browse our online portfolio at www.drurydesigns.com.

HI-TECH AT HOME IN A NATURAL SETTING

“Gladys listened to us and gave us everything we wanted: a better layout, integrated technology, natural materials and a simple design. Our kitchen ended up exactly how we wanted it.” -Gina Bognar

Homeowners: Gina and Kevin Bognar of Naperville

Designer: Gladys Schanstra, AKBD

Project: Kitchen renovation

Solutions: An awkward workflow, limited counter space and inadequate cabinet storage contributed to the kitchen's shortcomings. The Bognars wanted a kitchen that flowed, appeared modern yet rustic, and hummed with integrated technology.

After considering six kitchen design firms, the Bognar's chose Drury Design. Gladys's design relocated the sink into the angled island, which houses a hidden computer processing unit, the microwave and storage. Cultured stone tops the stainless steel hood and clads the column for a natural look. Family photos, homework, TV news and movies beam into the kitchen from a wireless Internet connection.

Glen Ellyn Kitchen Walk 2007 features several of Drury Design's client projects, including the Frischkorn family's dreamy kitchen pictured above. Here, a raised floating island anchors the room with its custom designed and hand-crafted features. Illuminated glass insets highlight a colorful collection of glassware in the floor-to-ceiling display wall.

The word on trends from Drury's Designers:

DESIGN TREND - TINA

“Chocolate wood tones will continue to be popular for their dark, warm and rich feeling. And, the deep brown fits so well into earthy color palettes. Rich reds contrast really nicely with darkened maple cabinetry. We're seeing more clients carry the dark wood theme from the kitchen to the entire house.” -Tina Muller

DESIGN TREND - TERRY

“Along with the darker colors, there will still be a trend toward “furniture” for the kitchen and bath. Just like we mix the furniture in the rest of the house, the mixing of finishes—dark/light/medium, painted/glazed and stained/glazed—will probably be around for quite a while...” -Terry Kenney

DESIGN TREND - GAIL

“The trend is going back to more simplicity. Turnings and carved moldings will still be popular, but with simpler design elements. Transitional pieces will be mixed with traditional pieces for a more eclectic look.” -Gail Drury, CKD, CBD

DESIGN TREND - GLADYS

“In terms of materials, almost anything goes: cultured stone, concrete and glass. We're starting to use different glass pieces to accentuate the design. And, technology will continue to upgrade the function of the kitchen – in everything from the cooking equipment to accessories to incorporating wall-mounted computer screens into the design.” -Gladys Schanstra, AKBD

DESIGN TREND - JANICE

“Some clients want a clean, sophisticated look while others want a comfortable, natural looking Tuscan or French Country setting. Beautiful turnings, glass cabinet doors, and furniture-type pieces integrate with any style. The level of detail and embellishment ranges from subtle to dramatic to support the overall look” -Janice Teague, CKD

NEW STYLES IN THE STUDIO

An English pub with a transitional flair features custom-made mullion designs repeated intermittently on glass and wood doors. An antique glass refrigerator mirrors the design. The concept integrates a commercial bar design influence (down to the ice chest and drink server) in an innovative, elegant bar setting that would add functional elegance to any home.

DRURY DESIGN SUPPORTS THE ARTS

McANNICH ARTS CENTER AT COLLEGE OF DUPAGE

Drury Design Kitchen & Bath Studio is pleased to be a 2007-2008 corporate sponsor for The McAnich Arts Center, also known as The MAC at the College of DuPage. In addition to being mentioned in each production's program as well as on The MAC's website, Drury Design's sponsorship includes presenting a performance.

According to Stephen, the concert is the perfect match for Drury Design's client community: "Ann is the crème de la crème of our season." The Chicago Tribune writes, "Callaway establishes herself as one of the best equipped jazz vocalists swinging today."
